

How do we define the contributions for our experiences?

Part of our essence as organizations is to explore ways in which we can make economy more inclusive by designing pricing and contribution systems that allow for socio-economic diversity to access every service and experience. In a world where relationships are usually set back by the influence of the market, we want to double down on love and connection as the main forces of our work.

This is why we designed this contribution system, where families that have greater financial capacity today can do a higher contribution, others with average income can do an market based contribution, and those with lowest income can still access this experience contributing less.

Generosity based pricing like this has the potential to turn the social fabric upside down by promoting practices of collective support that transcend the current dehumanized market paradigms. All extra contributions will serve our other social projects around the world. To know the contribution we suggest for you, you can look into your family salary and calculate the sum of facilitation and accommodation costs.
